ANOTHER LOGAN ARTIST

Logan has produced many vocalists and instrumentalists of no mean natural ability, and it is very gratifying that not a few of these have seen fit to cultivate that ability under eminent artists in this country and in Europe. A number of these might be named, but it serves our purpose here to call attention to but one at this time—Miss Anna Meyer, daughter of Mrs. Anna B. Phillips. It will be remembered that Mrs. Phillips and Miss Meyer returned but a few months ago from a two and a half years' stay in Europe, but it was not generally known that the trip was particularly for Miss Meyer's education in music. Yet this is true, and while in Berlin, where most of the time was spent, the young lady studied constantly with Arnsen and the famous Godowsky. The writer doesn't know all that Miss Meyer learned nor how much she yet has to learn, but is inclined to feel that those who have not heard her play since her return have indeed missed a treat, and we do know that those who have heard her, express surprise that the young lady does not give a public recital that all her friends may note and enjoy the good that persistent effort and contact with capable and famed artists has undoubtedly wrought.

On their return home, Mrs. Phillips brought with them one of the C. Beckstein grand pianos, which in truth is a thing of beauty and a joy forever. The instrument is a beauty in appearance, of splendid tone, and is one of the make used by the titled heads of Europe. Miss Meyer used this instrument while in Berlin, and by artists there it was said to be a piano of exceptional worth. Both Mrs. Phillips and Miss Meyer are proud of their piano, and rightly so.

Since her return Miss Meyer has been teaching, and at this time has a very fair-sized class. She has a special studio arranged for pupils and is taking no little pride in the work.

WHEN THE ELEVATOR STUCK.

Perhaps the Proprietor Was Too Anxious to "Show Off."

Last year, while abroad, Mrs. Mann and I had the pleasure of visiting Germany near where Bach was born, says Louis Mann, in the Sunday Magazine; also the place where Luther re-wrote the Bible; in fact, there were a number of historical localities near by, and we stopped over night at a little inn in Eisenach, where the landlord greeted us in broken English.

"Ah, you are American beebles, yes? Once I was in America—once in Avenue A, yes? You had nice time, yes? You enjoy, yes?"

We were amused at his efforts to be sociable, and asked to be taken to our rooms.

The host informed us that there was an elevator. He whistled and shouted down the shaft for "August," then invited us to step into the cage, himself running the elevator. We were half way up the first floor when, with a rattety clank, the cage stuck.

After much effort we gained the office floor once more, and the landlord said:

"It is step out, please; the juice is out. Never, never, this happen before, please. Up to-night is not possible; but down is it."

SMART RETORT OF CRITIC.

Journalist Proved Himself Quite Equal to the Occasion.

A Parisian journalist recently wrote an unfavorable criticism of the performance of a well known actress. The latter was keenly wounded, and watched for a chance to avenge herself. She was one evening at the Varieties, with a young aristocrat for an escort, when she espied the critic. She had a package with her which she requested her friend to deliver in person.

The dandy rose and, taking the package, walked over to where the journalist was sitting with a party, and presented it to him, saying:

"Mademoiselle, who admires your talent, has requested me to present you with this as a souvenir from her."

The critic took it and opened it before his friends, who had heard the dandy's little speech. It contained about a dozen goose quills, and smiles and suppressed laughter went around.

But the critic was equal to the occasion.

"Ah, my dear sir," said he to the messenger, "please give my best thanks to the young lady for these pretty feathers. I was aware of the fact that she plucked her admirers, but I really did not imagine she did so on my account."

He Paid for All.

The English custom of free seats and collection plates in church is puzzling the continental visitors. In Roman Catholic countries it is usual to make a small payment on entering a church. A Frenchman on a visit to Manchester not long ago, according to the Guardian, attended service in one of the parish churches. With him was a party of English friends. The foreigner was seated at the outer end of the pew. The plate came round in due course, and the visitor was the first to deposit a coin in it. The collector was about to pass the plate to his English friends when the Frenchman interposed: "Ah, no, I have paid for all the seats."

His Day Off.

A postmaster posted the following notice on his shutter, recently:

"All parties expectin' mail are hereby notified to git all that's comin' to 'em in advance—any time before next Thursday, that bein' the day we have app'inted to go huntin'—not havin' had a holiday from the government since July 4, and the said government seemin' to forget that bein' only human, we ned rest and recreation occasionally. There's some little mail here for the Joneses and the Tompkinses—but it don't amount to much, as it's all got one-cent stamps on it. There ain't nuthin' much in the business nowhow!"

Social Affair.

The children and grandchildren of Mr. and Mrs. Ferdinand Jacobsen gathered in on their Wednesday evening and together they had a most enjoyable time. The marauders took with them a supply of the good things of this earth cooked to domestic Science perfection and a feature of the evening was a sumptuous meal. Before leaving, the aged couple was presented with a nice little sum of money as a token of the love and esteem in which they are held by their posterity. Both Mr. and Mrs. Jacobsen are getting along well in years and neither has been in the best of health in recent months. However, Mr. Jacobsen is in less pain from his chronic rheumatism than he has been in a long time. The couple will spend Christmas in Ogden with relatives.

Elevators and Their Dangers.

An elevator man calls attention to the fact that in every accident that occurs to elevators the only persons seriously hurt are those standing near the door.
